Lesson from nature.

During a study of the migration characteristics of geese, scientist found a rather interesting natural instinct, among others. It was well noted that if a goose falls ill and has to separate from the flock— two other geese will fall back and land with it. The two geese will remain with the ailing goose to protect and nourish it back to health; and will remain by it's side until it either dies or is able to fly again. If the goose recovers, the three geese will then take flight to rejoin the main flock.

It is this example of natural love and care that we humans should learn from. Project Broken Wings exist very simply to serve those who may feel broken and left behind.

ONE LIFE AT A TIME

Project Broken Wings has mentoring programs designed to support:

- Job shadowing
- Life Skills
- Interpersonal Relationships
- Conflict and Dispute Resolution
- Career Planning
- Effective Communication
- Etiquette and Professionalism

Through our comprehensive programs participants gain valuable experience and training in a myriad of life and vocational areas. Our dedicated staff and volunteers bring a wide range of education and experience into a safe environment for each participant to reach their fullest potential in learning. Meticulous attention to detail and care is given when addressing any social or behavioral challenges experienced by any of our participants through proper counseling and guidance.

We know that we cannot save the world, however Project Broken Wings' staff and volunteers are each committed to working to affect one life at a time in a positive manner adopting the concept of “..in our space, in our time, you and I can make a difference”.

We invite your involvement. Please visit www.projectbrokenwings.org to learn more.

WHY WE CARE...

Project Broken Wings was founded and exist under one simple principle - that every child deserves the opportunity in life to dream and believe. Tragically, too often this is not the case for some kids who come from and live in under-served and underprivileged environments. Through the detailed process of restoring un-airworthy aircraft back to airworthy condition, Project Broken Wings volunteer staff of aviation professionals work with children age 12 and above to "make the plane fly again". In the process, participants not only gain valuable hands on experience in aircraft maintenance, but an extreme sense of accomplishment and improved self-esteem.

Mission Statement: Project Broken Wings is a faith-based philanthropic non-profit organization whose mission is to serve the community and its citizens through youth and young adult enrichment programs and activities.
